

ABSTRACT

A method and system are provided for controlling the air/fuel ratio provided to an internal combustion engine during the time period when a hydrocarbon trap, coupled downstream of the engine, is being purged. In particular, the air/fuel ratio provided to the engine is biased rich of stoichiometry when the downstream hydrocarbon trap is being purged.